

Daleville man convicted of eighth felony

A 34-year-old Daleville man could face life in prison after a jury convicted him of first-degree marijuana possession, authorities say.

Dale County District Attorney Kirke Adams said Alfred Bernard Jones faces a minimum of 15 years after the conviction because he had seven prior felonies.

He was found guilty of felony possession on Thursday after the jury deliberated for less than an hour, Adams said. Jones was also convicted of possession of drug paraphernalia.

Adams said Jones was charged after Daleville Police executed a search warrant at his residence in December.

In 1996, Jones was found guilty of manslaughter in Dale County and sentenced to eight years in prison, according to court records. Some other convictions were drug-related, according to court records.

A sentencing hearing is expected to be set later.
