

Dothan Eagle, Letter to the Editor, February 17, 2006

'Thanks for caring'

I would like to publicly commend the new district attorneys in Barbour, Bullock, Dale and Geneva counties and the residents of the counties in their choice of these district attorneys.

Ben Reeves and Kirke Adams displayed their concern for victims of crime even before they took office. They are committed to improving the plight of victims by implementing programs and insuring public awareness.

They have both installed personnel to work with victims and their families through the criminal justice system, keeping them informed of dates and procedures of their cases, giving physical and emotional support and meeting with families to include them in any decisions regarding their cases. Both district attorneys serve on a board for victims' rights, giving their time and money for victims' assistance.

As a victims' counselor working with district attorneys in 26 counties, I can appreciate that these four counties are on their way to caring for victims as much as do Houston and Henry counties. Thanks for caring.

Joyce Miller
Dothan